

THE GOVERNOR GENERAL · LE GOUVERNEUR GÉNÉRAL

It gives me great pleasure to extend greetings to everyone taking part in activities marking National Engineering Month, this year focusing on the theme of “There’s a place for you!”

From the outset of my mandate as governor general, I have been advocating for innovation, reason and critical thinking. At every opportunity, I have encouraged Canadians to imagine how they might improve the world in which we live, to take action and to share their success stories with others. Every advance in our learning has an impact on our lives, and we cannot help but be inspired by Canada’s outstanding achievements in engineering.

Throughout the month of March, opportunities abound for us to appreciate the tremendous impact that the work of engineers has on our day-to-day lives and to learn more about how rewarding a career in engineering can be. I invite you all to make the most of this month!
